NPA bags 29 rifles in Bukidnon raid

Rebels also seize firearms in Capiz, Negros Occidental

THE COMMUNIST NEW People's Army on Tuesday night raided a military outpost in Bukidnon, killed an Army officer and seized 29 assault rifles in one of their most successful attacks on a military target this year.

Maj. Ernesto Torres, an Army spokesperson, said about 50 NPA guerrillas attacked a military patrol base, setting off a gun battle that killed an Army sergeant and wounded a militiaman.

Torres said several guerrillas were wounded during the clash and were taken away by other rebels.

An Army platoon of about 30 soldiers was deployed to secure the base and help pursue the attackers, he said.

"This is a big debacle, definitely it will be investigated because so many firearms were taken," Torres said.

He said among the firearms taken were M-16 and M-14 rifles, which are used by snipers.

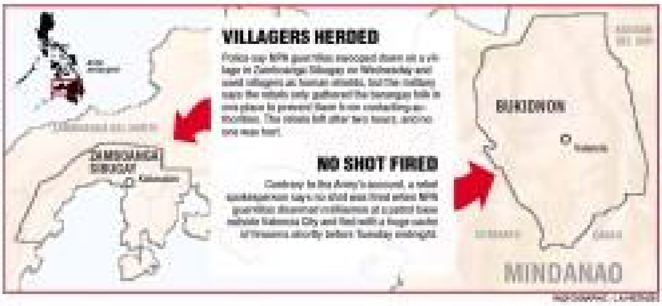

A spokesperson of the communist-led National Democratic Front in Mindanao, however, told reporters that no shots were fired during the NPA raid.

Cesar Renerio, the NDF spokesperson, said a platoon of guerrillas under the NPA Ernesto Bas Command stormed the military detachment in Barangay Bano, outside Valencia City, at around 11 p.m., and quickly disarmed the militiamen.

"The enemy was too complacent ... Our fighters caught them by complete surprise," Renerio said.

"Several members of a paramilitary unit inside the base did not offer any resistance. At least 29 rifles were taken from the detachment," he added. "There were no shots fired, according

GMA allies begin burial ceremony for impeach bid

By Michael Lim Ubac

DECLARING THAT THE MOVE TO OUST President Macapagal-Arroyo was beyond resurrection, administration allies were poised last night to scuttle the impeachment complaint against her that was killed by the House committee on justice last week.

Repeating what they did in September last year, the pro-Arroyo congressmen were to uphold the committee report killing the second impeachment complaint in less than a year against the President for lack of substance.

The House in a plenary was to conduct a roll call balloting in which each of the 233-member chamber was to be given three minutes to explain the vote. A vote of a third of the membership is required to bring the case to trial in the Senate, but the minority did not have the magic number of 79.

But debates late into the night delayed the vote.

Who will pay? Gov't forms body to probe sinking

A VILLAGER wades through oil slick that contaminated a mangrove forest in Nueva Valencia, Guimaras, on Wednesday. The Philippine Coast Guard warned of a "looming ecological time bomb" in the face of the country's worst oil spill. AP

By Leila B. Salaverria, Christine O. Avendaño and Inquirer Visayas

NEARLY TWO WEEKS AFTER THE oil-filled MT Solar I sank off Guimaras Island and spilled its contents, the government formed a Special Board of Marine Inquiry to investigate the sinking and determine the liabilities of those involved.

The 13-member SBMI was given 72 hours starting yesterday to submit an initial report to the Department of Transportation and Communications, and two weeks to one month to conduct the investigation.

The SBMI is composed of Rear Adm. Danilo Abinoja of the Philippine Coast Guard as chair; Primer Rivera, deputy administrator of Maritime Industry Authority as vice chair; and representatives of the Philippine Ports Authority, the Professional Regulation Commission, master mariners, chief engineers and lawyers as members.

SBMI is tasked with determining the cause of the sinking, the person or persons responsible for it, and the violations of maritime laws, and rules and regulations to be cited as basis for legal action, according to Transportation Secretary Leandro Mendoza.

The board will also recommend measures to prevent the recurrence of similar incidents.

Guimaras folk warned against 'neurasthenia'

By Christian V. Esguerra

CHRONIC EXPOSURE OF GUIMARAS residents to bunker fuel oil from a sunken tanker off the island might lead to a psychiatric condition known as "neurasthenia," according to Health Secretary Francisco Duque III.

The condition "covers a wide spectrum of symptoms, including the sensation of pain or of numbness in various parts of the body, chronic fatigue, weakness, anxiety and fainting," says the British Columbia Health Guide website.

"We caution the people against bathing, swimming or wading into the oil-contaminated water," Duque said yesterday at a press conference. "We also warn them not to eat shellfish and other aquatic products from the contaminated waters."

Duque said neurasthenia could also manifest in depression, sleep disturbances, impaired attention and lack of initiative, dizziness and palpitation.

He said a patient could only be diagnosed with neurasthenia if such symptoms were consistently present for three months.

SPECIAL REPORT

THE ADMINISTRATION OF PRESIDENT Macapagal-Arroyo is battling insurgencies on three fronts but is neither equipped with a coherent national security strategy nor a law to give teeth to its campaigns.

The most dangerous threat comes from reform-minded young officers in the Armed Forces of the Philippines. They have access to organic weaponry and other war materiel and operate inside the belly of the government. Moro separatists stalk Mindanao. Communist insurgents roam the countryside and some urban centers, mounting ambuscades, political assassinations, banditry, kidnappings and collecting revolutionary taxes.

Auto makers' position on biofuels bill hit

By Romel M. Dominguez

THE PHILIPPINE FUEL ETHANOL Alliance on Wednesday criticized local auto makers for "obstructing and delaying the passage of the biofuels bill by presenting 'baseless claims' that cast doubt on the economic viability of the use of fuel blends containing plant-based additives.

PFEA groups government and private sector backers of the large-scale use of biofuels, including the Philippine Sugar Millers Association, Sugar Murphy Foundation (representing planters), the Sugar Regulatory Administration, Center for Alcohol Research and Development and Petron Corp.

The group said in a statement that the Chamber of Automotive Manufacturers of the Philippines Inc.'s basis for opposing ethanol were erroneous and misleading.

Campi president Elizabeth H. Lee, however, clarified that the automakers were not opposing the use of biofuels like bioethanol—a blend of gasoline and ethanol from crops such as sugar and corn. What the group was opposing, Lee said, was the blanket mandates that required the large-scale use of biofuels since not all types of vehicles were compatible with such fuels.

Also, Lee said Campi was concerned about the time frame for the implementation of a biofuels law considering that domestic production might not be able to meet the large-scale demand that might arise from a mandated use of biofuels.

She said that if local supply would not suffice, importation of ethanol would defeat the aim of stimulating domestic production and might result in the government funding subsidies.

At the same time, Campi said there should be a price gap between bioethanol and pure gasoline to make the shift to biofuels more meaningful for motorists since the former packed only two-thirds of the latter's power, resulting in less mileage.

PFEA yesterday said it completed in 2005 a study which found that ethanol production and use would help achieve energy security, environmental quality, employment in the countryside, and economic progress.

"What Campi obviously wants it to simply obstruct and delay the passage of the biofuels bill by presenting baseless claims."

"The short-term goal is to find a cheaper alternative to gasoline," the group said. "But the long-term goal is to be capable to locally produce an alternative to gasoline."

More than its lower price, ethanol would insulate the country from the volatility of world oil prices, the PFEA added.

"Campi should be supportive of these developmental goals. Their opposition to ethanol clearly shows that they are willing to sacrifice national interest in favor of their own," it said.

"Car firms in many countries openly support ethanol," PFEA said.
